CONCEPT NOTE

The Constitution (One Hundred and Twenty-Second Amendment) Bill, 2014, seeks to amend the Constitution of India to facilitate the introduction of Goods and Services Tax (GST) in the country. The proposed amendments in the Constitution will confer powers both to the Parliament and the State Legislatures to make laws allowing the levying of GST on the supply of goods and services on the same transaction. In addition, Central Sales Tax (CST) is levied on inter-state sale of goods by the Central Government, but collected and retained by the exporting states. This multiplicity of taxes at the State and Central levels has resulted in a complex indirect tax structure in the country, that has mitigated the hidden costs involved in trade and industry. No credit of excise duty and service tax paid at the stage of manufacture is available to the traders while paying the state level Sales Tax or VAT, and vice-versa. Presently, the Constitution empowers the Central Government to levy excise duty on manufacturing and service tax on the supply of services. Further, it empowers the State Governments to levy Sales Tax or Value Added Tax (VAT) on the sale of goods. The proposed dual GST envisages taxation of the same taxable event, i.e., supply of goods and services, simultaneously by both the Centre and the States.
